Supervision Session Evaluation

It is helpful for both supervisor and supervisee to regularly review the supervisory relationship. This form facilitates open dialogue and using this form encourages explicit discussion of the supervisory processes. Both supervisor and supervisee should answer the questions and review. It can be used as a quick ‘check-in’ at the end of the session or can be used more formally to review processes.

1. What do I think went well in today’s sessions? (how do I know this, what did I get out of today’s session)

2. How was our communication today? (review openness, ability to review ‘self-issues’, client-issues, systemic issues)

3. Were there challenges faced in today’s session? What would I have liked to happen in the session that did not occur? (be concrete/give examples)

4. I would rate today’s session

5. I will take to the next session these ideas to improve our supervision
